課程簡介

The practice of emergency medicine across the globe continues to evolve. The emergency department remains the safety net for access to care for billions of people around the world. The practice of emergency medicine, and the especially leading the emergency department becomes more complicated and challenging every day. Just as healthcare delivery systems must continue to evolve to become more efficient, so must the leadership model of the emergency department.

The evolution of emergency department leadership will require a more collaborative approach with others. Leadership will become more of a partnership with other clinical and non-clinical stakeholders of the emergency department and the hospital at large. Successful leaders will need to develop a broader palate of skills and be willing to lead by “sharing” leadership in order to create successful emergency departments in the future.
