課程簡介

Healthcare professionals play a vital role as promoters and caregivers of the public's physical and mental health. Therefore, their own well-being and the creation of a supportive and friendly work environment are equally important. This course begins with an introduction to the fundamental concepts and principles of gender equality. The gender equality related laws—the Gender Equity Education Act, the Gender Equality in Employment Act, and the Sexual Harassment Prevention Act—as well as the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) will be introduced. In addition, the course will discuss the core principles outlined in the Ministry of Labor's Guidelines for the Prevention of Workplace Violence and Unlawful Infringement (4th Edition). Ultimately, the course is designed to empower healthcare workers with resilience through self-care, cultivate positive interpersonal interaction skills, and provide practical strategies for building a gender-friendly healthcare workplace, thereby promoting healthier interpersonal relationships and overall physical and psychological well-being.
